The Commencement of Hostilities.

Bloodless Conquest of Saxony.

From the London Times, June 18. It would be van to expect that the t legraph should throw sufficient light to satisfy public suxiety on the movements of the armies in the celd. The Prussians rereported to have invaded the king long faxony on the east, west, and north. Their cutposts are said to be within authous of Rumboure, in Robernia, they have come up the libe as far as M = n and it was expected that they would enter bresden last evening, as King John of Saxony and all his army had abaudoned the roapital and were faling back up n Bohemia Such are said to be the results of only two
